

2020 NATIONAL SYMPOSIUM
for Academic Palliative Care Education and Research

PALLIATIVE CARE: INCLUSIVE, INTEGRATIVE, AND INTERPROFESSIONAL

Sheraton San Diego Hotel and Marina
October 8 - 9, 2020

Keynote Speakers

Jessica Nutik Zitter, MD

Jessica Zitter, MD, MPH, is a critical care physician and palliative care specialist who is helping to shape the national conversation around how we die in America and shining a light on healthcare disparities that can worsen the end-of-life experience for African American patients and families.

Michael Fratkin, MD

Michael Fratkin, MD, is a palliative care physician and telehealth innovator who in 2014 founded ResolutionCare, a community-based palliative care program that serves patients and families via videoconferencing technology and in-home visits in rural communities in Northern California.

Now in its fifth year, the Institute convenes the National Symposium to host thought leaders in palliative care scholarship so palliative care concepts are woven into academic, clinical or non-clinical education where future professionals' expertise in palliative care is cultivated. The National Symposium will be of interest to anyone engaged in designing and delivering curriculum, performing research, or providing instruction and oversight of professionals in training.

CALL FOR ABSTRACTS NOW OPEN

Abstracts for an individual paper, panel session, workshop or poster related to the Symposium theme are invited. Submitters for this year are particularly encouraged to share their scholarship, research, or practice innovations that demonstrate inclusivity, take action to address barriers to access for people, promote cultural understanding, or advance teamwork among the professions in palliative care.
